Hanne Enemark is currently based in the UK having left her native Denmark, a country immersed in a strong design heritage. Having studied glass & ceramics at the prestigious Royal College of Art she now has a studio based in London. Hanne Enemark is a designer and maker whose sensitivity to the hot and cold qualities of glass draws heavily from her Scandinavian upbringing.

Enemark's work celebrates the many conflicting qualities of glass, from soft and malleable airy fluidity to sharp rocky brittle shards. Her works are hugely labour intensive and all pieces are hand blown and polished using age old techniques.

In her own words;

'The key themes in my work are minimalism, simplicity and beauty. I play with the perception of glass by experimenting with contrasts such as hard and soft, sharp and smooth, heavy and light. By amplifying the visual tension created between two opposites, I explore the intriguing and visually stimulating nature of contrasting elements. Ultimately, I hope to evoke wonder and amazement with the final result'

As part of an ongoing programme of Vessel Editions, working with studio artists, Hanne Enemark's range of lighting and artworks offer endless possibilities to be personalised and developed for individual projects.

The Imago and Phototaxis Collections are made in collaboration with digital tools specialist and designer Lynne MacLachlan, who created the unique digital software tool used to generate the butterfly wings. The tool has the ability to never repeat a pattern, allowing endless butterfly designs. www.lynnemaclachlan.co.uk
